APA-7 Electronic Examples

Entire Website (APA pp. 350-352)

When you need to cite an entire website, not a specific portion of the web site, it is sufficient to give the address of the site in just the text:

Sam Houston's website can be very informative (<http://www.shsu.edu>).

Specific Webpage (APA pp. 350-352)

If you are citing a specific page from a website, you will need to create a reference entry. Keep in mind that the "What" is often divided into "child" and "parent" where the parent (the larger site containing the cited information) is italicized and the child has no special formatting. Also, include the title of the parent site if it is not part of the URL.

Vonnegut, K. (2007). The sculpture. <http://vonnegut.com/sculpture.asp>

Webpage With an Organization as Author (APA pp. 350-352)

For websites that do not list an individual author, a corporate author or entity is usually listed at the bottom of the page. Treat this author as you would the individual author above.

Sam Houston State University. (2010). Majors and programs. <http://www.shsu.edu/academics> 8

E-Books (APA pp. 321-323)

For E-books, include the author, the year of publication, the title of the work, the kind/edition of the work (Kindle book, Audiobook, etc.), the publisher, and the web address or DOI if available.

Christian, B., Griffiths, T. (2016). Algorithms to live by: The computer science of human decisions. Henry Holt and Co. <http://a.co/7qGBZak>

Online Newspaper Article (APA p. 320; p. 351)

Brody, J. E. (2007, December 11). Mental reserves keep brains agile. The New York Times. <https://www.nytimes.com/2007/12/11/health/11iht-11brod.8685746.html>

Online Magazine Article (APA p. 320)

Chamberlin, J. (

Online Journal Articles

APA journal references use a Digital Object Identifier (DOI) number that, unlike a URL, will not break. Most documents found in a
