

---

Entries in a reference list are created and assembled in a specific order; a reference generally is composed of four elements: author, date, title, and source. Please refer to page 313 of the APA Publication Manual 7th Edition, Chapter 10: Reference Examples (APA 2020) for more reference examples

How to cite some basic source types. APA journal references use a DOI number which, unlike a URL, will not break. Most journals and journals which utilize APA Style provide their DOI either as a DOI or a URL. If a DOI is not provided but a URL is available, make sure to test the URL. When an article has a DOI, the number goes at the end of the entry. If an article does not have a DOI, simply leave it off the entry. If your professor instructs you to do so, the DOI goes at the end of the entry.

For authors, include only the first 19 names, an ellipsis (...), and the final name.

For a book, place the author's name and the individual work first, followed by the title in "italics" and the general information for the book in which it was published. When citing a chapter, place the title of the entry first, followed by the title of the book in italics and the general information for the book in which it was published.

Remember: Use title case for the capitalization of book, chapter, and article titles, BUT use sentence case for the capitalization of periodical or journal titles.

National Cancer Institute. (2018). Facing forward: Life after cancer treatment (NIH Publication No. 18-2424). U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, National Institutes of Health. <https://www.cancer.gov/publications/patient-education/life-after-treatment.pdf>

University of Oxford. (2018, December 6). How do geckos walk on water? [Video]. YouTube. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qm1xGfOZJc8>

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. (2018, January 23). People at high risk of developing flu-related complications. https://www.cdc.gov/flu/about/disease/high\_risk.htm

Christian, B., & Griffiths, T. (2016). Algorithms to live by: The computer science of human decisions. Henry Holt and Co. <https://a.co/7qGBZak>